

Family entertainment at Sea2Sky event

EUROPEAN Researchers Night takes place on September 23 showcasing science on a grand scale. The Irish event, Sea2Sky, takes place in Salthill, Galway. In total, 800 venues across 320 cities in Europe will celebrate the occasion.

Sea2Sky is a free, family-oriented event at which hundreds of scientists will showcase their work in the fields of marine, atmospheric and astronomy. The event will also feature music and entertainment for visitors. Sea2Sky is being organised by NUI Galway, in collaboration with the Marine Institute and Galway Atlantaquaria.

Chief organiser, NUI Galway's Dr Andrew Shearer, says, "This is a very unique opportunity for the public to participate in experiments and demonstrations. The jam-packed programme offers something for people of all ages and gives children and adults alike the chance to be a scientist for one day."

Sea2Sky is a free family event and will take place in Leisureland and Galway Atlantaquaria, Salthill from 11am to 11pm. To view the full programme, or for more information, visit www.sea2sky.ie.

■ Members of the growing army of volunteers signing up for Sea2Sky are NUIG students, Caroline Hoade from Oranmore and Oisín Robbins, from Clara, Offaly.
